Fashion Week. Robin Kay steps down

Toronto Fashion Week has been sold to a global event management firm and founder Robin Kay is stepping down as executive director after 13 years at the helm.

"Fashion week is much bigger than me as an individual person," Kay said in an exclusive meeting with Torstar News Service and Peter Levy, a representative for new owner IMG Canada.

"I really believe that this is the best next step on the runway for the event, for the City of Toronto and for our market as Canadians on the global runway," said Kay.

IMG Canada bought the event for an undisclosed sum.

Toronto Fashion Week is a biannual event that showcases Canadian designers and is meant to boost the local fashion industry. It has grown from an audience of 200 in 2000 to an event that attracts 40,000 guests over five days.

IMG Worldwide operates and manages sports, entertainment and fashion events in 30-plus countries. Its portfolio includes fashion weeks in Berlin, New York, Tokyo, Mumbai, Moscow and Miami.

Kay will remain president of the Fashion Design Council of Canada (FDCC). She would not reveal how much IMG Canada paid the FDCC for Toronto Fashion Week, or how much she will receive as a result of the deal. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Police investigate second shooting in Danzig probe

Crime. Investigators looking into possible link between mass shooting on Danzig Street and later shooting in the area

Hours after a gunfight broke out at a community barbecue in Scarborough last month, two bullets ripped through the front window of a house 10 kilometres away.

Toronto police have confirmed they are now investigating a possible connection between the mass shooting on Danzig Street and a later shooting on nearby Whiteleas Avenue.

An 18-year-old man who lives at the home where the second shooting took place was arrested July 27. Shaquan Mesquito is charged with threatening to harm people on Danzig Street the day of the block party.

Police did not release any information at the time of his arrest. Torstar News Service learned about the charges through court documents.

Mesquito, tall and broad-shouldered, appeared briefly in a Scarborough courtroom Wednesday, wearing a black polo shirt, with his hair in cornrows.

The teen is charged with two counts of uttering threats "to cause seriously bodily harm" to people who attended the Danzig community barbecue on July 16 — an event that ended in the worst mass shooting in Toronto's history, with two dead and 23 suffering gunshot wounds.

Police further allege that on July 27 Mesquito was found carrying a restricted weapon — a loaded .22 calibre revolver — for a "purpose dangerous to a public place." He faces nine weapons-related charges.

Const. Wendy Drummond said police do not have any information to suggest the weapon he is accused of carrying was used in the Danzig Street shooting, nor do they have information that places Mesquito at the block party.

Police said the shots on Whiteleas Avenue were fired at 1:05 a.m. — about 2 1/2 hours after gunfire erupted on Danzig. No one on Whiteleas Avenue was injured.

Mesquito is the second person charged in the block party shooting.

Nahom Tsegazab, 19, also appeared briefly in a Scarborough courtroom Wednesday, charged with reckless discharge of a firearm. Police are not alleging that he fired the fatal bullets. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Killers being sought

- The manhunt continues for the shooter or shooters who killed 14-year-old Shyanne Charles and 23-year-old Joshua Yasay, and left 23 others with bullet wounds. Police say witnesses are fearful about coming forward.
- Whiteleas Avenue, near Finch Avenue East and Markham Road, has known violence in the past. In April 2006, homes on Whiteleas were sprayed with bullets during a drive-by shooting. In March 2000, an 18-year-old man was shot in the leg as he arrived at a house hosting a birthday party.

Markham takes big step toward NHL-size arena

Sports. Site plan revealed, with plans to fast-track start of construction

Plans for a proposed NHL-sized arena were officially submitted to the City of Markham on Wednesday morning, a crucial step in a lengthy approval process aimed at getting shovels in the ground as early as this fall.

The site plan for the 20,000-seat arena was submitted by Graeme Roustan, chairman and CEO of GTA Sports and Entertainment, at a news conference at the Markham Town Centre. The application includes the design, a traffic study and sustainability study that will be reviewed by staff and opened to public consultation before it is approved.

"This is one of many steps that has to take place, but it's an important step," said Mayor Frank Scarpitti. "When you submit your site plan application, it indicates from the private sector side that you are serious about the project and want it to proceed."

Once it's approved, a building permit can be issued and construction can begin on the $325-million arena.

Scarpitti said the city will make the project a priority.

He told reporters that starting construction this fall is ambitious, but "it's possible we could be in the ground later this year."

There's still a lot of work to be done on negotiating the financial framework, legal agreements and the degree of community access to the arena.

The city plans to hold public meetings in the fall to share details.

Roustan unveiled the design for the arena, which will be solar-ready and bird-friendly, and will hew to LEED standards for sustainability.

In April, Markham council overwhelmingly approved a unique public-private financing plan for it. The city will borrow $325 million to pay for construction, half of which will be reimbursed by a private group headed by Roustan and financially backed by Rudy Bratty, of the Remington Group Inc. The other half will come from future development in Markham and revenue from the centre when it opens.

The aim is to have the arena ready for business by late 2014. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Port Lands project steaming ahead

After dodging a proposal that would have turned the Port Lands into a carnival sideshow, development of the massive parcel of land is back on track.

Waterfront Toronto and the city unveiled the latest vision for the Port Lands on Wednesday, almost a year after it was nearly derailed by Coun. Doug Ford's plan to build a Ferris wheel, monorail and megamall.

The new $1.9 billion plan moves up the timeline for development, which is what the city asked for last September when councillors voted against Mayor Rob Ford's bid to take over Waterfront Toronto, the city-provincial-federal agency tasked with developing the lakeshore area. The city also joined on as a partner.

The original plan for the Port Lands was contingent on making the area floodproof in case of a massive storm that would overwhelm the Don River.

Accomplishing that meant moving the mouth of the river from the Keating Channel to the Toronto Harbour, an immense undertaking with a price tag of more than $600 million — a sum Waterfront Toronto didn't have.

Instead, this time around, landscape architect Michael Van Valkenburgh has taken a novel approach to flood protection, reconfiguring the proposal so flood protection is phased in one area at a time. This also reduces the initial costs.

And it means parts of the 400-hectare Port Lands can be sold off for development, with the money used to build flood protection in another area.

Currently, there's no funding for the project.

TIFF unveils Canadian lineup

Wide variety. Popular directors return to Toronto for a number of world premiers

TIFF has unveiled its "eh" list of Canadian films for its annual September event, featuring directors familiar and new.

Comedy, drama, thrills and suspense are in the Canuck lineup of features during the Toronto International Film Festival, which runs Sept. 6-16.

Sarah Polley, Xavier Dolan, Bernard Émond, Bruce Sweeney, Sudz Sutherland, Rob Stewart and Manon Briand are among the returning directors, many bringing world-premiering films.

They'll be joined by many first-time feature directors, including Jason Buxton, Kazik Radwanski, Igor Drljaca, Kate Melville and a Cronenberg named Brandon.

"Through comedy, thrills, drama and suspense, films in the lineup present stories of youth and violence, coming of age, the environment, dysfunctional families, sex and celebrity," said Steve Gravestock, TIFF senior programmer in charge of Canadian films.

"From intimate, affecting stories with big impact to films with global scope, the Canadian films in this year's Festival will move audiences."

Ontario boys bask in the festival spotlight

It's not all George Clooney and Johnny Depp at the Toronto International Film Festival — although eight eager young stars of I Declare War wouldn't mind sharing some red-carpet time with them.

For most of the Ontario teens, ages 13 to 16, this is their feature-film debut, although many have had roles in smaller movies, TV series and in commercials. But they worked the TIFF media conference at the Fairmont Royal York Hotel like old pros Wednesday afternoon, handing out buttons for the movie, doing interviews and posing for photos after the official announcement of the Canadian slate of films at the fest.

"I'm just really thrilled. It means a lot and we worked really hard on it," said Kolton Stewart, 13, of Simcoe, who was joined by excited castmates Dyson Fyke, Aidan Gouveia, Spencer Howes, Michael Friend, Andy Reid, Siam Yu, Alex Cardillo and Eric Hanson.

I Declare War, which has its world premiere in TIFF's Vanguard program, follows a group of 12-year-old boys who start out playing an innocent game of capture the flag in the local woods on a summer day. Filmed by directors Jason Lapeyre and Robert Wilson from the kids' point of view, the action becomes increasingly violent in their imaginations.

The movie was shot in Scarborough, where Wilson said he used to play war as a kid.

Riot police halt student protest

Price hikes. Ongoing unrest assumed to be encouraging voters to re-elect Premier Charest out of spite

Quoted

"It's time to bring everyone back to their responsibilities and duties as citizens."

Quebec Premier Jean Charest

A Montreal student protest designed to send an anti-government message in the midst of a Quebec election campaign was broken up by riot police Wednesday.

The protesters had been blocking the entrance to the Hydro-Quebec power-utility building. After several objects were tossed at police officers, the crowd was forced to disperse.

The protesters voiced their opposition not only to the Charest government's tuition hikes but also to its increase in electricity rates. They belonged to the more militant Quebec student federation, the CLASSE.

The riot squad moved in and chased the 200-odd demonstrators down a busy downtown boulevard. Some people dressed in black and wearing masks tried to get into building by the back, but they were dispersed again.

The events unfolded at a politically unpredictable juncture: during an election campaign and in a week where students are holding votes on whether to extend their strikes.

It's unclear whether the students will choose to head back to class — and how that decision might affect the election campaign.

It has been accepted as conventional wisdom in Quebec that continued unrest might encourage voters to re-elect the Charest Liberals out of spite.

But the premier has downplayed such talk. He said Wednesday that more unrest is the "last thing" he wants, as a political leader and as a father.

But Charest says he expects students to respect the law, and for teachers to teach. His controversial Bill 78 imposes stiff fines on anyone who blocks a school, as protesters did in some cases last spring.

"The law says what? It says a Quebec student has a right to an education and the right to enter his classroom. Is that too much to ask? ... I don't think so," Charest told a campaign news conference.

Study says. Stressed men find plumper women hot

Many men might say they're most attracted to women who are svelte, icons of that so-called feminine ideal portrayed in magazines and other media.

But never fear, you ladies of more Rubenesque proportions: it seems a man's body size preference can be somewhat fluid — and one of the factors that appears to affect it is stress.

British researchers have found that men faced with a stressful situation tend to change their assessment of what constitutes an attractive female, moving away from slender to a range of plumper women.

For Olympics devotees, think heftier weight lifters or hammer throwers rather than lean and lithe gymnasts or sprinters.

Testing the effects of stress

- Forty-one men were subjected to a number of stress-inducing tasks, including a mock job interview
- Both groups were then shown photographs of female body types ranging from emaciated through obese, with faces removed.

One World Trade Center fire a false alarm: Reports

Authorities say a fire on the 88th floor of One Word Trade Center in New York is likely a false alarm. The tower is the main part of the construction at the site of the 9-11 attacks. The building is now the tallest in New York.

A spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which owns the site, says the fire report was called in by a member of the public Wednesday and is believed to be a false alarm. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fairmont Winnipeg is holding down the fort

No girls allowed.
A grown man asks hotel staff to build him a fort ... and the rest is online viral history

ELISHA DACEY

Going along with a guest's cheeky sense of humour just might have netted a Winnipeg hotel a giant PR boost.

As of 11:30 a.m. local time on Wednesday, more than 160,000 people had viewed a series of photos uploaded by a guest at the Fairmont Hotel in Winnipeg only 14 hours earlier. The user, identified as InGordWeTrust on photo sharing site Imgur, said on the site when he booked the room, he asked for a pre-made pillow fort and two vanilla cokes under the "special requirements" section.

Staff at the hotel provided him with instructions on how to build a fort, several extra pillows and blankets, a basket of free goodies and a coupon good for two of the requested drinks, made from scratch by the hotel staff.

The man, Gordon Relph, documented the gesture by uploading several pictures, including two pictures of himself with a smile on his face and photos of the fort he constructed.

It quickly spread.

"We've got a remarkable team here at the hotel," said Jacques Laverene, spokesperson for the Fairmont Winnipeg.

"Oddly enough, this isn't a one-off — we deal with an interesting mix of clientele here and we get some pretty off-the-wall requests. It's part of the culture here at the hotel."

Relph, 26, said he was taken aback by the attention.

"Obviously I never thought it would take off like this," said Relph from an office in Winnipeg, where he's in town on business until Friday.

The Kelowna-born Calgarian said he's never made this kind of request from a hotel and was surprised when staff complied. "I thought, well, let's just do it."

He said he used the fort and even slept on the floor all night.

Publicity stunt. Vegas billboard with dummy on noose startles drivers

This image provided by KVVU-TV shows a billboard with a mannequin dangling from a hangman's noose near the Strip in Las Vegas.
PETER DAWSON/KVVU/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Even by Las Vegas standards, it was a shocking billboard: a mannequin dangling on a hangman's noose below a black sign with the ominous words "Dying for Work."

Nevada Highway Patrol Trooper Jeremie Elliott says the emergency service calls started coming in as the sun came up early Wednesday, with drivers worried the stiff, black-suited dummy swaying at the end of a rope was a real person.

"It's a publicity stunt, obviously done in bad taste," said Elliott, adding that officials were focused on getting it down quickly to avoid distracting drivers during the morning commute.

The graphic display along the interstate was one of at least two unauthorized signs spotted Wednesday morning in the Las Vegas area. Another was white with black lettering that read, "Hope You're Happy Wall St.," and a similar mannequin hanging off the edge.

While nobody has publicly claimed responsibility for the signs, the Occupy Las Vegas group posted photos of the displays on its website.

Gunman shot himself: FBI

The gunman who killed six people at a Sikh temple in the U.S. died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head after he was shot by police, the FBI announced Wednesday.

Authorities previously said an officer had fired the shot that killed gunman Wade Michael Page.

The FBI says investigators have not yet "clearly defined a motive" for Sunday's shooting at the Sikh Temple of Wisconsin.

Social media and anti-social misfits

Controversial. Psychologist believes someone's absence from sites such as Facebook could be a red flag

If you're a Facebook holdout, or have chosen to abandon the social-media hangout for any number of reasons, be prepared to be labelled a misfit — or worse.

The net has been abuzz this week about a story attributed to the German newsmagazine Der Tagesspiegel in which a psychologist concluded that the slim social-media presences of two accused killers, Norwegian Anders Breivik and Colorado-theatre-massacre suspect James Holmes, were suspicious.

With a global population of seven billion and about 955 million registered Facebook users — technological and economic barriers notwithstanding — that's a scary proposition.

However, an immediate concern may be the weight placed on the social network by employers.

While the Maryland Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services have backed off earlier demands for the Facebook passwords of workers to check their profiles for troubling behaviour, it's still seen as a tool to vet potential employees.

Quoted

"Not having a Facebook account could be the first sign that you are a mass murderer."

How tech news site Slashdot summed up Der Tagesspiegel's story

"Anecdotally, I've heard both job seekers and employers wonder aloud about what it means if a job candidate doesn't have a Facebook account. Does it mean they deactivated it because it was full of red flags? Are they hiding something?" asked a Forbes.com writer.

And the dating game tells a similar story.

Slate advice columnist Emily Yoffe told one woman: "I'm fine with people not having a Facebook page if they don't want one. However ... if you're of a certain age and you meet someone who you are about to go to bed with, and that person doesn't have a Facebook page, you may be getting a false name. It could be some kind of red flag."

For the digital generation, that kind of sentiment is understandable, said Queen's University media professor Sidneyeve Matrix.

"Facebook really is the way that you vet folks that you like, you cross paths and socialize with," she said. "There's a lot of common-sense wisdom there, because we do want to vet people."

Wanted: Single white drug mule

Trafficking 2.0.
That sweet-talking cybermate on the online-dating site could be the front for a drug cartel in search of unwitting smugglers

LILLO MONTALTO MONELLA
Metro World News in Buenos Aires

One day, Sharon's and Catherine's online daters, named "Frank" and "Marc," asked them to finally meet in person, but not before one last favour: Travelling to Argentina to pick up some sensitive documents.

The women eventually agreed, thinking their dream had finally come true. But the documents, hidden without their knowledge in a secret compartment of their luggage, turned out to be cocaine.

That's how Sharon Mae Armstrong, 55, a former high-level civil servant in New Zealand, and Catherine Blackhawk, 49, an American nurse, suddenly became the last link in a drug-trafficking chain. Astonished, they ended up behind bars last year in the same federal prison outside Buenos Aires.

Their cases show that dating deceits — which rose by 150 per cent last year alone, fraud-protection agency Iovation reveals — are moving beyond the simple "take the money and run" into the domain of highly organized criminal cartels.

"People like Sharon are thrown into the fray with luggage where the cocaine is easily detectable," says Claudio Izaguirre, president of the Argentine Anti-Drugs Association. "She is just a decoy, a scapegoat. The real mules are behind her, managing to get through while the attention falls on her."

In January, a third person fell into the same cybertrap and was caught at Buenos Aires airport: Paul Howard Frampton, 69, a distinguished professor of physics and astronomy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Frampton has said he was lured to meet a woman he thought he had been chatting with on the Internet, Czech-born lingerie model Denise Milani. He was given luggage to carry by someone claiming to be Milani's intermediary. The case contained two kilograms of cocaine.

Julieta Lacroze, Armstrong's lawyer in Buenos Aires, says it's hard to find exact figures on the pervasiveness of dating scams. Victims tend to feel embarrassed or humiliated, so most frauds go unreported.

"It is easy for criminal organizations. They just have to sit down and chat," Lacroze said. "Three months of work via the Internet, and that's it. For five kilograms of cocaine, that's a fairly good return."

Case study

Sharon Mae Armstrong, arrested on April 13, 2011, faced 16 years in jail but in the end was sentenced to four years, 10 months. Waiting for an appeal, she tells Metro how she got tricked.

"A cousin of mine created an account for me on a dating website. It had been 20 years since I had been in a relationship, and I was not really interested. On the very last three or four days before the trial subscription's expiration, I was approached by this guy who said he was living in the same city where I'd just moved looking for a new job. I was in a very vulnerable position. He kept saying we were going to get married. He was a very good talker. I should have known."

Q&A

'I lost a lot of work due to what happened'

Argentine model Daiana Antivero, 19, was arrested last year on drug-smuggling charges. She was later released, but the incident earned her the nickname "Narco Model."

You were accused of organizing logistics for a gang of traffickers trying to smuggle cocaine in Holland. What happened?
It all started from a favour I did for my ex-boyfriend. He asked me to make a phone call to book a hotel for a guy I hadn't even met before. It was a supposed drug mule, but I did not know it.

Now your ex-boyfriend is in jail. Do you suspect him of using you and being a part of a cartel?
I don't think he did. A trafficker usually has a lot of money. He used to get around the city with public transport — a narco doesn't travel this way.

How do you feel about being called Narco Model? Did it help your career?
Not at all. I lost a lot of work due to what happened.

What do you think of Sharon Armstrong's case?
They always take advantage of weak or naive people. My experience helped me a lot. Now I think at least five times before doing a favour for someone. I did it without realizing, and the day after, I was in jail. LILLO MONTALTO MONELLA/METRO WORLD NEWS

Weird sect kept kids prisoners in underground 'city'

'Kingdom' raided.
Children lived in cells for years, rarely saw the light of day and never attended school

A self-proclaimed prophet had a vision from God: He would build an Islamic kingdom — under the earth.

Digging began in a Russian province about a decade ago and 70 followers soon moved into an eight-level subterranean honeycomb of cramped cells with no light, heat or ventilation.

Children were born. They, too, lived in the cold underground cells for many years — until authorities raided the compound last week and freed the 27 sons and daughters of the sect.

Aged one to 17, the children rarely saw the light of day and had never left the property, attended school or been seen by a doctor, officials in the oil-rich Volga River province of Tatarstan said Wednesday. Their parents were charged with child abuse.

The sect's 83-year-old founder, Faizrakhman Satarov, was charged with negligence, said Irina Petrova, deputy prosecutor in the provincial capital of Kazan.

The children were discovered when police searched the sect grounds as part of an investigation into the recent killing of a top Tatarstan Muslim cleric.

Proved right after a decade: Agencies tapped phone calls

Affidavit filed. Suspect's long doubted ex-lawyer now vindicated by CSIS's and CBSA's recent admissions that agents tapped conversations

A lawyer who represented two men branded as threats to national security said Wednesday he was stunned to discover confirmation of his long-held suspicions that government agents had listened in on his phone calls with his clients.

Federal lawyers had heaped scorn on him when he first raised the issue a decade ago, Rocco Galati said, and it was only recently he learned he'd been right all along.

From March 1999 to the end of 2003, the Toronto lawyer acted for two Egyptians slapped separately with national-security certificates: Mohamed Mahjoub and Mahmoud Jaballah.

Lawyer Rocco Galati outside Federal Court in Toronto on Wednesday.
COLIN PERKEL/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The government deemed the men terrorist threats, with much of its case based on secret evidence they were not allowed to see.

A dozen years later, both men — in prison or under house arrest despite facing no charges in Canada — are still fighting to have their certificates quashed.

In 2008, Canada's spy agency admitted listening in on Mahjoub's calls with his lawyers, but only as a way to monitor his bail conditions, one of which included his consent to having his phone tapped.

A judge quickly ordered an end to the practice.

Mahjoub's current lawyers have since gained access to information that shows the Canadian Security Intelligence Service and the Canada Border Services Agency had been intercepting communications between him and his lawyers, including Galati, from the get-go.

Four Mistakes that can Cost You on Car Insurance

Keep your rates low by avoiding these costly mistakes.

The cost of car insurance is a major expense for most people, and rising rates often seem unavoidable. But an increase in your premium is not always something you can't avoid. Often, simple errors lead to over-paying for insurance. These four mistakes are the quickest way to see higher premiums.

Earning a traffic ticket. Tickets are one of the most common reasons that insurance rates go up. Many different traffic violations can be responsible for an increase. Speeding, running right lights and careless driving are all violations that result in insurance rates that are higher. It takes three years before the ticket is removed from your driving record.

Not shopping for rates before you buy a new car. People often find themselves shocked by the cost of insurance on their new car, but there's a way to avoid that. Every car comes with a different insurance rating, and some are pricier than others to insure. When you're considering options, get car insurance quotes on each possibility before you make a buying decision.

Failure to shop around at regular intervals. Many people avoid it because they believe it's a hassle, or think they can't get a better rate. This is one expensive mistake. People who take the time to shop around almost always pay less; and with internet quoting sites like InsuranceHotline.com, it's easier than ever.

Failing to take advantage of multi-policy discounts. What do your home and auto insurance have to do with each other? Well, if you insure them all in the same place, it could be quite a lot – of savings that is. Most insurance companies offer a multi-policy discount. If you don't have all of your policies in the same place, you could be missing out on some big savings on all of your policies.

Remember that the very best way to keep your insurance premiums low is to be a safe driver and shop around for better rates. Insurance quoting sites like InsuranceHotline.com can help by comparing your insurance rate against over 30 car insurance companies to find you a lower rate available for your driving profile.

It's not just about saving you money. Wait, it is.

Visit InsuranceHotline.com today and experience a fast, free, and easy service that works for your wallet.

Court orders Tories to find new arbitrator

Labour dispute. Canada Post's biggest union learns via Facebook of Guy Dufort's ties to Conservative party

The Federal Court has ordered the Harper government to find a new arbitrator in a lingering dispute between Canada Post and its biggest union.

In a decision released Wednesday, the court said arbitrator Guy Dufort's previous work for Canada Post and history as a Conservative candidate in Quebec casts doubt on his impartiality.

"In light of the unique context of labour relations and the special law, the court concludes that a reasonable and sensible person might worry that the arbitrator is biased because of these two reasons," says a summary of the decision.

The union says Dufort's Facebook page contained links to Conservative groups under the "activities and interests" section, and he was "friends" on the social networking site with both Labour Minister Lisa Raitt and Tory MP Steven Fletcher, the junior minister responsible for Canada Post. The links have since been removed.

"The union has written to Lisa Raitt, asking that a mediator be appointed to facilitate the collective bargaining process instead of appointing another 'friend' to force a winner-takes-all final offer selection on the parties as mandated by the back-to-work legislation," CUPW said in a statement.

The government is now considering its options, and Raitt's office had little to say on the matter.

"Our government took action and passed a law to restore delivery mail to Canadians. We acted in the best interests of Canadian in doing so," the minister said in a statement provided by her office.

Android dominates smartphones worldwide

Phone wars. iPhone, BlackBerry losses are Android's gain

Got an iPhone? You're in the minority.

There were four Android phones for every iPhone shipped in the second quarter, research firm IDC said Wednesday. That's up from a ratio of 2.5 to 1 in the same period last year.

The success of Samsung's Android phones helped Google's operating system extend its dominance in the smartphone market. The gains came largely at the expense of BlackBerry phones made by Research in Motion Ltd. and Symbian phones made largely by Nokia Corp.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gaining ground

Samsung Electronics Co. and other phone makers shipped nearly 105 million Android smartphones in the April-June quarter, giving Android 68 per cent of the worldwide market, which is up from 47 per cent last year.

SIGNALLING AN END TO CYCLISTS' CAMARADERIE

HE SAYS...
John Mazerolle
metronews.ca/voices/he-says

I am a rogue of sorts. A self-loather, perhaps. A traitor to my own people.

I ride a bicycle, and I hate cyclists.

It's a moral quandary, to be sure. Since there's apparently a war between bikes and cars, I am a king without a country. I kickstand alone.

It's tough, but I have little choice in the matter. Experience has taught me that many cyclists do not know the rules of the road. In fact, I'm not confident that most cyclists know there are rules of the road.

This makes every bike ride I take an emotional roller-coaster.

At first, I'm happy. This stage lasts a good 15 seconds.

But then I start to tense up like a child with divorcing parents, because I know there's going to be yelling.

And, sure enough, sometime within the next few minutes I'm barking at someone, usually a 'fellow' cyclist. Despite my shrieks, it never seems to get any better. I guess I'm not yelling properly.

Cyclists fail to signal, dominate shared paths, run red lights, pass on the right of cars turning right, and ding their bell at people while riding on the sidewalk, all with alarming regularity. Can you imagine if a car moved into a bike lane and honked at a cyclist to move? The Car vs. Bike War would go to Def-Con 1.

As history and J.J. Abrams have taught us, it's human instinct to hate The Others because you don't know their perspective and therefore assume the worst. But to me, it makes more sense to hate The Sames because I'm well aware of their perspective and don't understand why they aren't as good as me.

I'm not a great cyclist by any means, but it isn't exactly a high bar to jump over. No BMX skills required.

And when confronted with their lack of skills or knowledge, most cyclists give one of two infuriating answers.

1) "The chances of me hurting anybody by breaking the rules are much less than if a car did it." This is equivalent to saying, "Yeah, I punch stuff randomly, but imagine if I had a baseball bat. That'd be crazy."

2) "Motorists wouldn't know what to do if I signalled properly and followed the rules anyway." At which point I have to get my helmet replaced because I've slammed my head repeatedly against a table.

It hurts me to say it, but I hate you, bad cyclists. I don't know where we took a wrong turn, but I'm sure you didn't signal it.

So our friendship must now come to a full stop. Then again, I guess you don't know what that is...

I know following the rules of the road is tough, but someone has to do it.

Record heat tough to shake off

U.S. saw warmest July in more than 100 years

Teagan Rogers, 10, enjoys a splash of cool water at Borah Pool Tuesday in Boise, Idaho.

This probably comes as no surprise: U.S. scientists say July was the hottest month ever recorded in the Lower 48 states, breaking a record set during the Dust Bowl of the 1930s. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- In the past, skeptics of global warming have pointed to the Dust Bowl to argue that recent heat isn't unprecedented.
- But climate scientist Jake Crouch, of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, said this shows that the current year "is out and beyond those Dust Bowl years. We're rivaling and beating them consistently from month to month."

The formidable work of creating Summerworks

Theatre. In its second decade, juried festival constantly looking to challenge convention

Summerworks, Toronto's annual festival of cutting-edge theatre — which starts today for an 11-day run — has certainly made its mark on the city's creative arts scene over its two decades in existence.

"Many would say without Summerworks they wouldn't have a career," says Michael Rubenfeld, the fest's artistic producer.

Scratch Summerworks' vitality up to its insistence on offering original work from local artists and the rigorous selection process for its Local Series, which makes up the bulk of the fest's program.

Each spring Rubenfeld gathers a panel of three jurists with a "strong understanding of good art" to sift through the 200 submissions the festival receives each year, ranging from scripts for plays to videos of interpretive dance.

"We're always looking for work that is critiquing or challenging traditional systems," he says.

The juried process evolved over the past decade as the fest moved away from a lottery system.

This year's jury includes Rubenfeld, now in his fifth year as artistic producer, theatre and video artist Jordan Tannahill, Governor General award-winning playwright Erin Shields and actor and director Nigel Shawn Williams.

The quartet whittle down the material over four increasingly lengthy meetings.

Like any art, the process is subjective and there's no definitive way to predict which scripts will connect with an audience.

"There's a lot of arguing, absolutely," says Rubenfeld, as each member tries to sway the others on their personal favourites.

Quality, timing, representation and the past work of the people involved were all weighed to come up with this year's collection of 33 works. Ultimately though, it comes down to "do I want to sit in the theatre for an hour and watch this?"

Rubenfeld admits that it's a draining process, which he likens to building a small city. "By March, you never want to read a play again, but you've got 10 months to forget."

Music works too

While Summerworks owes its well-earned reputation to its excellent theatrical program, there's more to the fest than just playwrights and thespians. This year's installment also includes a robust line-up of musicians including Buck 65, Sandro Perri, Maylee Todd and Hawksley Workman performing in collaboration with many of the city's theatre artists. There's also the Live Art series, curated by Forest Fringe founder Deborah Pearson, S.L.I.P. Program workshops focusing on "the business of art" and the Performance Bar series on Captain Ron's Ship of Friendship.

Online

- Summerworks runs until Aug. 19. Check out the website at summerworks.ca for the full program.

MIKE DOJC

When Philip Morris wanted to shed their sullied rep, they rechristened themselves Altria. To mark his rebirth as a reggae artist, Calvin "Snoop Dogg" Broadus has recast his animal spirit by adopting the handle Snoop Lion. The documentary Reincarnated premiering at the Toronto International Film Festival in September will tell the tale. While swapping a bark for a roar may be a major transformation, Snoop isn't the first cool cat to drop a moniker like it's hot.

Sean 'Diddy' Combs

In 2001, a few weeks after being cleared of gun possession and bribery charges that could have put him away for up to 15 years, Sean Combs decided an alias update would be a great way to start the next chapter in his life. "I'm not doing it as serious as Prince. I just want something fresh," he told MTV, explaining his rationale for taking up the new mantle of P. Diddy. A serial name changer, the hip-hop mogul has gone by Puff, Puffy, P. Diddy, Diddy and King Combs at various times. In May 2011 Combs decided to have fans call him Swag for one week.

Prince

On the occasion of the pint-sized wonder's 35th birthday, Minnesota's most funky denizen rechristened himself as an unpronounceable love symbol, a fusion of the glyphs for male and female. With no words to call him by, the star became known as The Artist Formerly Known As Prince. During his symbol phase Prince recorded some of his most eclectic and experimental material. In 2000 he reverted to his given name. "My publishing contract with Warner-Chappell expired, thus emancipating the name I was given before birth — Prince — from all long-term restrictive documents."

Garth Brooks

In 1999 the country music giant with more than 100 million albums sold threw fans for a loop and decided to reinvent himself as a rock star. Enter alter-ego Chris Gaines, a bewigged, sour-looking Australian with a soul patch. In the faux-tragic riddled back story, Gaines, the guitarist in the group Crush, goes solo after the band's lead singer perishes in a plane crash. His subsequent album sells like hotcakes and he wins a Grammy. Billed as the fictional character's greatest hits collection, In the Life of Chris Gaines was a flop and Brooks deep-sixed the character.

Lisa Bonet

The actress remains best known for her '80s heyday when she played Denise Huxtable on the Cosby Show, blazed bohemian fashion trends and was Lenny Kravitz's muse. But in 1992 Bonet went to court to have her name legally changed to Lilakoi Moon. The official explanation for sprucing up her ID was to protect her privacy. Professionally she continued to use her given name in films like Enemy of the State and High Fidelity. Bonet's original taste for names was headline news once again in 2009 with the announcement of the arrival of her son Nakoa-Wolf Manakauapo Namakaeha Momoa.

Ron Artest

Last year the Lakers forward, an imposing defensive dynamo whose skills can put a serious damper on an opponent's shooting percentage, became Metta World Peace. The irony of an athlete once slapped with an 87-game suspension for taking a brawl into the stands having World Peace stamped on the back of his jersey was not lost on commentators. This past April, after a Metta elbow gave Oklahoma Thunder guard James Harden a concussion, non-sports fans must have raised an eyebrow at the ensuing "World Peace Suspended" headlines.

Country power couple. McGraw-Hill take their act, kids to Las Vegas

Country music power couple Tim McGraw and Faith Hill are heading to Las Vegas.

They will be performing a 10-weekend run of shows at The Venetian starting Dec. 7. The couple announced the news Tuesday during a press conference at the hotel.

Hill said they were thrilled about the opportunity to be creative in a way they've never experienced together before.

"Being in this intimate environment, it will be 'us,'" added McGraw. "I'm very excited."

The show is called Soul2Soul, named after their hugely successful co-headlining tours in 2000 and 2006. According to Pollstar, their 2006-2007 Soul2Soul II run remains the highest-grossing North American tour in country music history.

The Las Vegas shows will mark the first time in six years that McGraw and Hill have performed a full concert together in the United States. McGraw said they are in the process of building the show and he promised that the production will be cutting edge.

Headliners

Before Hill and McGraw take over the main stage, the Venetian is featuring the following acts:

- Joan Rivers. Sept. 6-8, Nov. 8-10
- Craig Ferguson. Sept. 13-15
- David Spade. Sept. 21-22, Oct. 5-6
- Tim Allen. Sept. 28-29, Nov. 3

They may be superstars, but McGraw and Hill are also full-time parents of three daughters. During the show's run, the family will live in The Venetian. Hill said the hotel worked around their children's school schedules to make this happen.

McGraw said his daughters (15, 14 and 11) are excited to see the shows in Las Vegas, joking that "they probably won't see ours, though."

'Miserable' Deadmau5 feels a need to chill, slow down a bit

After a year of continuous work, both in-studio and live, Deadmau5 is feeling the toll, and is taking some time for himself. JASON MERRITT/GETTY IMAGES

Time out. Acclaimed Canadian DJ says he's feeling pressure after rapid elevation to stardom, but will still tour, write new music

Rapidly rising Canadian electronic producer Deadmau5 says he's going to "slam on the brakes" for a while, writing in a blog post that he's "pretty miserable right now."

The Niagara Falls, Ont., native — whose real name is Joel Zimmerman — has been all over the news this year, performing at the Grammy and Juno Awards, appearing on the cover of Rolling Stone and headlining the inaugural Veld Music Festival at Downsview Park in Toronto this past weekend.

But the busy year may have finally taken its toll, with the 31-year-old writing that he needs to "unplug for a wee bit" and "force (himself) to endure some quiet time."

However, Zimmerman added that he wasn't planning on cancelling any upcoming shows and will continue to write new music.

He even says that he'll release something new in the near future, teasing fans to look out for "something crazy real soon like."

But Zimmerman, who recently ranked sixth on Forbes' list of the world's highest-paid DJs with earnings of $11.5 million, still said he needed to slow down.

"I got a lot of work to do on some stuff," he wrote. "So, best I just chill ... out a bit and just get it done, and get it done RIGHT, until I'm 100 per cent satisfied with it. Then our regularly scheduled program shall continue."

Sackhoff's courage, honesty resonate with fans

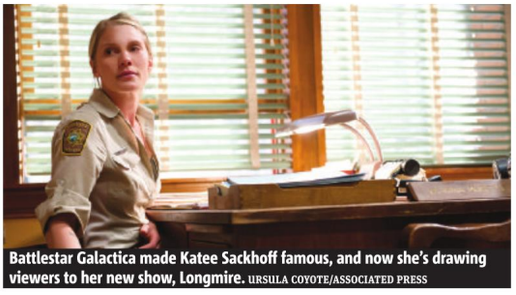
Star of Longmire. Popular actress sees a lot of herself in outspoken TV star, Real Housewife Bethenny Frankel Actress Katee Sackhoff has a confession: She's obsessed with TV personality Bethenny Frankel.

"She's probably a kindred spirit of mine," said Sackhoff, who stars on the A&E series Longmire, in a recent interview. "She's my sister from another mother (and) I've never met her."

Frankel became famous as one of the cast members of The Real Housewives of New York. She's written several books and recently debuted a talk show on Fox.

"I've never met somebody in the public eye who speaks as honestly as I do," Sackhoff says of Frankel, "and it's refreshing because there are times where I question whether or not people can actually handle the truth or if they want it. I'm a very open book about who I am. I think it's the only way to kind of touch people and she's done it. It's pretty amazing."



Battlestar Galactica made Katee Sackhoff famous, and now she's drawing viewers to her new show, Longmire. URSULA COYOTE/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sackhoff, 32, has had success playing women who aren't shrinking violets.

She starred as Kara "Starbuck" Thrace on Battlestar Galactica, which made her a fanboy sex symbol. Now she's Deputy Sheriff Victoria "Vic" Moretti on Longmire, based on the bestselling novels by Craig Johnson. Robert Taylor plays Sheriff Walt Longmire.

Sackhoff says she enjoys playing "Vic."

"I love the fact that she walks into a room and she wakes you up. She's loud, she's fast and she's great at her job, and she says things that she probably shouldn't say and she does things that she probably shouldn't do," she says. "I think that she's probably the closest that I've played to myself, which is really fun."

Longmire premiered to 4.1 million viewers, making it A&E's top-rated original series premiere ever. It's been picked up for a second season.

"(The ratings are) four times what Battlestar used to get an episode. It's a hit and it's really weird. I feel this fondness for it that I felt toward Battlestar," Sackhoff says.

She credits supporters of Battlestar with helping make Longmire a success.

"I do believe that loyal fanbase is a large chunk of our viewership. I think that they're amazing and I'm incredibly lucky and our show is lucky and Battlestar was lucky," she says.

iCarly star moves on after emotional finale

Same character, new show. Jennette McCurdy will keep Sam Puckett alive when spinoff Sam & Cat debuts next year

Nickelodeon's hit show iCarly made Jennette McCurdy a star, and although the show will air its series finale in November, the 20-year-old Garden Grove, Calif. native doesn't have to worry about what comes next.

The network has tapped McCurdy and actress Ariana Grande to star in a spinoff tentatively titled, Sam & Cat.

The series will follow the girls' characters, Sam Puckett from iCarly and Cat Valentine from Victorious, as they become roommates and start a babysitting business.

Sam & Cat will be produced by Dan Schneider, who is behind Nickelodeon shows iCarly, Victorious, Zoey 101 and Drake & Josh.

"I couldn't be under a better person's wing, so I'm really happy about that decision," McCurdy said in a recent interview. "I haven't seen a script ... so I'm dying for information."

McCurdy describes taping the series finale of iCarly, which has won many awards and attracted a large following among adults as well as kids, as emotional.

"The last day of shooting was really sad. There was a lot of crying and there were a lot of hugs going around. None of us wanted to say goodbye really."

Besides acting, McCurdy loves singing. She recorded a self-titled album with Capitol Records Nashville, but is no longer under contract with that label.

Quoted

"The last day of shooting was really sad. There was a lot of crying and there were a lot of hugs going around. None of us wanted to say goodbye really."

Jennette McCurdy, iCarly actress. On on how emotional filming the series' finale was.

"I knew that I was starting this show, and I needed to be focused on that," she said. "I didn't want any one thing to get too muddied with the others. Hopefully a different label will like to sign me."

She has spoken with Schneider about incorporating her music into Sam & Cat.

The new show is expected to debut on Nickelodeon in the U.S. early in 2013.

Many Nickelodeon shows, like iCarly, are carried on YTV and Nickelodeon Canada in Canada.

McCurdy hopes that celebrities will appear on the new show, as they did on iCarly, which included guest spots by first lady Michelle Obama, Jimmy Fallon, One Direction and Jane Lynch.

Who would be her ideal guest star?

"Andrew Garfield. I'm gonna marry him," she said with a laugh. "In my dreams maybe. Sorry, Emma Stone. Emma Stone was on iCarly. If she sees this, she's gonna kill me. Oh my goodness. No. I love him though. I love his face. I love his hair! Andrew Garfield, I love you."

New YouTube shows shift the punchlines

Online trends. Comedians Poehler, Wilson and Latham work to stretch the limits of online comedy

On the debut episode of Smart Girls at the Party, Amy Poehler sits in a dark studio and solemnly introduces her first guest as a "singer, actor, dancer, musician, feminist, entrepreneur and skateboarder."

Sitting across from Poehler is a seven-year-old named Ruby, who cheerfully displays a just-completed drawing.

Charlie Rose, eat your heart out. This summer, while much of the TV world is in reruns, a number of comedians have taken to YouTube, including Poehler, Rainn Wilson, Walter Latham and, in a new role, Shaquille O'Neal.

Smart Girls at the Party is the flagship show for Poehler's YouTube channel of the same name, part of an ambitious initiative from Google's video-sharing site to plant a crop of niche-oriented channels from show business veterans. The rollout has continued through the year, gradually premiering more than half of the nearly 100 channels that YouTube has poured $100 million into, while pledging to spend another $200 million on marketing.

Comedy is only one of the many genres among the new channels (they range from the gaming hotbed Machinima to The Wall Street Journal), but it's perhaps the most viral-ready: Production value isn't needed to send a funny clip sailing through social media. Smart Girls at the Party, which has some 7,500 subscribers thus far and has generated more than 400,000 views, is geared toward adolescent girls and young teens with the stated aim to "celebrate individuals who are changing the world by being themselves."

"We wanted to celebrate the non-celebrity," says Poehler. "We wanted to embrace and highlight the cool period in any boy or girl's life where they're just so full of possibility, ideas and passion."

The channel includes shows like Ask Amy, a weekly check-in where Poehler answers questions from viewers. In one episode, Poehler, who's currently shooting a film directed by David Wain ahead of the next season of NBC's Parks and Recreation, waxes about managing stress while sitting in a bathtub.

In Meow Meow Music, Poehler's friend Amy Miles hosts a mini version of a Pee-wee-Herman-style variety show. Every episode of Smart Girls ends with a dance party.

"YouTube and Google and the Internet in general is filled with so much — I don't know — garbage humiliation stuff," says Poehler.

Baby No. 4 for Hollywood power couple? Not if Garner can help it

Jennifer Garner and Ben Affleck recently welcomed their third child, son Samuel, and there's apparently some disagreement in their house about whether or not their family is complete. "The fact that Ben wants another is true," Garner tells Extra. "I can tell you that would be a pretty uphill battle with me. I am not anticipating having any more kids." That makes sense, considering Garner's admission of how hectic baby No. 3 has made things. "It's absolute chaos," she says. "I really did not realize how much more work three was going to be than two."

Pulling a Pattinson? Sanders' wife spotted without wedding ring

Rupert Sanders has some serious regrets about his admitted affair with his Snow White and the Huntsman star, Kristen Stewart — especially since his wife, Liberty Ross, has been spotted out and about in Los Angeles with their two children but without her wedding ring. "Rupert is willing to do absolutely anything and everything he can to save his marriage. He realizes this is the worst mistake of his life, and he cannot believe he was so stupid," a source tells Radar Online. "The thought of losing his wife and children, who he loves more than anything in the world, is killing him."

Hakob Manoukian, Jennifer Lopez's driver, recently filed a lawsuit against the singer, claiming that he was forced to resign after being publicly embarrassed by her manager.

But now, JLo has answered with a $20 million-plus extortion countersuit, claiming Manoukian demanded money to keep her secrets from the press, reports TMZ.

We can't help but wonder: How much do you pay your driver if you sue him for $20 million? And does writing a gossip column disqualify you for the job?

Pattinson speaks!

Robert Pattinson has been lying low ever since girlfriend Kristen Stewart's very public affair with director Rupert Sanders.

That said, he has a movie to promote, so next week he'll make his first appearance on the only show too classy to provide material for this column.

Catch Pattinson Monday on The Daily Show with Jon Stewart, where he'll talk about his latest film, Cosmopolis, before getting harassed on Wednesday's Good Morning America.

Elton John trash-talks Madonna, but she isn't having any of it

Madonna has heard Elton John's expletive-filled criticism of her and her latest tour, and she isn't taking it lying down. "Ultimately, she doesn't care what he has to say about her in public or private. She has nothing to prove to anyone, especially Elton John," a source tells the Huffington Post. "To say her tour is a disaster is just silly. She is selling out arenas. (She's) singing new material and a few classic hits. (John) will be singing the same old songs until he dies."

So what did Obama like best about the new Batman movie?

Barack Obama has seen the latest Batman movie, the Dark Knight Rises, and he knows which part he liked best: Anne Hathaway's Catwoman. "She's spectacular," Obama told reporters, according to Hollyscoop. "She was the best thing in it. That's just my personal opinion."

Handling hot summer hair

Get the look. With temperatures soaring, it's the perfect time to sweep the mop off our sticky necks and up into a dreamy design

We're obsessed with the romantic braided crown that stylist and Redken Creative Consultant Guido Palau created for the Spring '12 Valentino show. We headed to Cutler/Redken Salons where stylist Jenny Balding gave us a step-by-step tutorial. Warning: You'll need some French braiding skills and patience. Or better yet, find a girlfriend who will come over and do it for you.

Tool of choice

- "Spray a dry shampoo — especially if you have fine hair — to your roots and mid length to add texture to your locks and for some more grip," says Balding.
- She likes Redken Powder Refresh ($8, redken.com).

Behold the finished product! METRO WORLD NEWS

1. Divide your hair into three sections: the front, the crown and the back. The finer the hair the thicker the sections need to be.

2. French braid the crown, braiding towards the right ear, and tie with a rubber band.

3. Braid the front section. Start from your left ear and work your way across the forehead until you get to behind the right ear.

4. Once your front braid has reached the right side, connect it with the crown braid.

5. Braid them into the remaining hair. Make sure to braid right down to the very tip.
6. Wrap the braid going from the left to right around your crown and pin.
7. Use three pins on each side and one in the center to secure your braid.
8. As you go through, pull some pieces out at the root to make your braids chunkier.

Down to the last detail

Science and style. Designer Francesco Russo will always sweat the small stuff

Francesco Russo, creative director for Sergio Rossi, doesn't measure change in dates, time or technological advances. For him, trends move by the millimetre.

Fashion — especially the accessories that are his hallmark — is a little bit art, a little bit science, but it's always about details.

For example, the difference in the shoe that's right for jeans and a T-shirt versus a cocktail dress can be the slightest change in the width of the heel or vamp of the toe, he says. It's probably something most people wouldn't notice, but those are the things that drew him into fashion.

"I have always been fascinated by fashion. I like the esthetics of beautiful things," says Russo, wearing a silk scarf tied around his neck and perched on the roof deck of Manhattan's exclusive Soho House.

"It could be design, architecture, furniture or fashion, but since the beginning, I was surrounded by women getting dressed up. It was natural for me to go into fashion."

He is very much the high-flying fashion jet-setter but also a historian and craftsman, linking in the same breath the glories of the Internet and its globalization of style with Yves Saint Laurent's groundbreaking trouser suits and the sexual revolution of the 1960s.

A world of wearables

Russo says he designs not for one woman but for many

- Sometimes he'll think about what all their boyfriends and husbands might like. He never gives a name to his inspiration and doesn't name products after specific people, but they always get a personality.
- He often gives them a full wardrobe, even if it's only stored in his imagination.
- "It's a good exercise for me to create a fuller look, but I get a more complete vision of the look of the woman if I think of her with no face."

Style scribe Anna Piaggi dies at 81

Vogue Italia says Anna Piaggi, a fashion journalist who provided inspiration for designer Karl Lagerfeld, has died. She was 81.

The magazine said on its website that she died in Milan on Tuesday. No cause of death was given.

Piaggi stood out in the front rows of Milan and Paris runway shows dressed in her eccentric style outfits, including funky hats and theatrical makeup.

She started her career as a translator for Mondadori publishing company, and went on to write for, among others, Vogue Italia.

TAKE A MUSICAL INTERLUDE TO PETERBOROUGH

There will be much dancin' in the streets of Peterborough this Saturday as the Sadies, The Dears and many other performers take the stage. It's all part of the Hootenanny on Hunter Street Festival. The free party kicks off at noon.

If indie rock music isn't your scene, there's also the Little Surf Band performing at the Little Lake Music Festival the same night. This summer beach band is one of many big acts appearing free at Del Crary Park this month (including former teen pop sensations Hanson on Aug. 25).

The beat doesn't end there, though, as just east along Highway 7 is the Havelock Country Jamboree Showdown competition. This event is a tease for the big event happening the following weekend, when the likes of Roseanne Cash, Lynyrd Skynyrd, Montgomery Gentry, Rita Coolidge, and Creedance Clearwater roll into town.

Now it's time to put some Neil Young on your weekend set list with a trip to the Youngtown Rock and Roll Museum in the music hall of famer's hometown of Omemee. Inside the museum you will find photos, instruments and other cool music artifacts from the 1950s and '60s.

Back in Peterborough, add to your vinyl library with a visit to Bluestreak Records, before checking out some up and coming rockers at The Red Dog bar.

There are lots of heart of gold musical memories in the land of 1,000 perfect getaways – Peterborough, Kawartha Lakes and Northumberland.

After only one visit, we're sure that "Our Favourite Place" will become your favourite place.

Off the flagpole and onto the fans

Long may it wave.
Flags make a colourful fashion statement at the London Olympics

Show some love for your land while you lounge. BEN CURTIS / THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There was no mystery as to which team Varun Pemmaraju was supporting: His American flag was tied around his neck, the stars and stripes floating like a cape behind him.

"I was going for the Superman, Captain America-look," said the beaming 19-year-old computer science and chemical engineering student from San Jose, California, as he stood a stone's throw from Olympic Stadium. "I thought America was a little underrepresented."

Patriotism and the Olympic Games have long gone together, but gone are the days when one just waved a flag. Now flags are worn.

The fashion flags can be found at Olympic Park and around London as shift dresses and smocks, pants and shorts, hats and shoes, even dangly earrings and bracelets. There's apparently no garment — nor nail polish — that can't be fashioned into something akin to a national banner.

Although the sponsorship police at the International Olympic Committee can stop merchants from using the five Olympic rings, there's no trademark police on flags.

Besides, capitalizing on a good fashion idea is not new. In recent years, "fast fashion" has transformed the retail industry, as mainstream companies seize the hottest ideas from the catwalk, copy them as quickly as possible and move them onto the shop floors. Some manufacturers have gotten so fast they can produce wearable creations from factory to store in the same season in which they were created by top designers at Chanel, Ralph Lauren or Dior.

None of these flag fashions are going to give Burberry a run for their money — they are not made to last.

Jayne Ody got her raincoat, which was covered in Union Jacks, from Primark, a British store that specializes in cheap, cheerful fashion. And it was a bargain, at 8 pounds ($13).

Her friend Ann Wanklyn was wearing two Welsh flags — emblazoned with a dragon — that had been sewn together into a simple shift dress. But Wanklyn is not about to claim she's a fashion princess — Olympic Park is a sporty crowd.

"You won't see anyone here walking around in heels, I can tell you that," Wanklyn said.

Support gets serious

Root with respect

Americans have rules outlining the proper way to show respect to the flag and athletes, as ambassadors and representatives of their country, are expected to respect that and do it right. Under federal law, the flag is not dipped to any person or thing, for example.

"The (USOC) take the ambassador program very seriously," said Bill Mallon, a historian.

Leading ladies lend faces to football campaign

Football fans will soon be pulling out their jerseys, but a few have gotten a jump on the season. Serena Williams, Melania Trump and Condoleezza Rice are among the NFL fans who'll be appearing in ads promoting team-themed apparel and gear next week in a campaign called It's My Team.

And these outfits aren't just for game day. There are fitted blazers, burn-out T-shirts and earrings.

In her ad, Williams — who is not only a fan but also a limited partner in the Miami Dolphins — wears her colours in a graphic T-shirt paired with a dressy little black jacket. The image makes its debut in September magazines.

"Forty-five per cent of fans are female and that continues to grow," says Tracey Bleczinski, vice-president of NFL consumer products. "We do have something for everyone, and this campaign aims to communicate that if you are living and wearing football, you can do it every day, year-round."

After the photo shoot, Olympic swimmer and TV host Summer Sanders wore her outfit home, Bleczinski says, and that's just what the NFL wanted. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Home prices set to slip 10 per cent over 2 to 3 years: Scotiabank

Scotiabank says the Canadian housing market is beginning to cool, especially in what has been the red hot markets of Toronto and Vancouver.

The bank says average Canadian home prices will eventually decline ten per cent over the next two to three years as demand softens and conditions for a buyers' market re-emerge.

Senior economist Adrienne Warren says Canada is expected to avoid the sharp drop seen in the U.S., but that downside risks in the housing market are increasing.

She says the price correction will be concentrated in Toronto and Vancouver, where supply risks and affordability pressures have the potential to trigger larger price adjustments. Record prices combined with tighter lending rules have reduced affordability and the housing market's momentum. Affordability will also be increasingly strained when mortgage rates eventually drift up from the historic lows where they have been for several years.

Price correction expected to be concentrated in Toronto and Vancouver. ISTOCK IMAGES

Lawyer assistance

Getting 'land only' tax bills

We recently purchased a newish home from someone who had bought the property six months ago. Once the dust settled, we started receiving tax bills from the municipality for 'land only' value. We attempted to contact our lawyer but he wasn't available to explain what this meant. How should we approach this?

LEGAL MATTERS
Jeffrey Cowan
home@metronews.ca

When a new home is built, the municipality usually has a "land only' value for the property which is basically the value of the empty lot without a structure on it. Once the builder constructs your home the value of the lot goes up substantially for tax purposes. The issue at this point is that municipalities are behind in assessing the new value of the property and so they will often continue to issue 'land only' tax bills which are very comforting to the new owner but there is a hidden issue. Once the taxing authority gets around to assessing the property and giving it the appropriate taxing value, they will retroactively go back and tax the property from the date it was occupied. This could not only mean the time that you have owned the property, but also the previous owner who sold you the property. This is something you will require the assistance of your lawyer and a wee bit of patience because people who no longer own a property, generally are reluctant to pay taxes.

Wouldn't it be nice to see your boat from your balcony?

Communities. Everyone has a fantasy lifestyle in mind — now you can live the dream with a variety of condo and townhome options

DUNCAN MCALLISTER

The 825-acre master-planned community of Port McNicholl sits on Georgian Bay, north of Toronto. SUBMITTED

The lifestyle high-rise trend started in Toronto in the 1960s, and was the vision for Crescent Town at Victoria Park and Danforth avenues.

Designed for the modern urbanite commuter, it was built adjacent to the Dentonia public golf course and had a covered walkway to the newly constructed Victoria Park subway station.

Now golf course communities are sprouting up all over the GTA, like Perspective Condos, a new development by Pianosi Developments located at Scarlett Road and Eglinton. You can walk across the street to the Scarlett Woods golf course and tee off in minutes.

If sailing is your thing, then the GTA's numerous waterfront condominium communities will be sure to accommodate you, like Canderel's Yacht Club condos located in Whitby Harbour opposite the picturesque Port Whitby Marina.

And if you're a mariner with the urge to escape the city, Port McNicholl is a new destination community north of Toronto on Georgian Bay.

The 825-acre master-planned community will cater to boaters with a mile-long deep water harbour. Townhomes are available from $400,000 that are situated right next to the yacht club.

Director of marketing for Skyline Destination Communities, Harley Nakelsky says that this development will appeal to cottagers from Toronto as well as year-round residents.

"It seems to be huge for the boater community to be able to see your boat, so we put this townhome project right beside the yacht club so you're going to be overlooking the water," says Nakelsky. The units all have decks on the main floor and off the master bedrooms with waterside views.

If you're a consummate shopaholic, then the Shops at Don Mills is where you want to be.

Billed as an outdoor lifestyle destination, "the shops" have urban lofts and suites situated in Cadillac Fairview's shopping centre complex at Don Mills and Lawrence, with the Flaire, Liv Lofts and Reflections projects.

Avid film goers will enjoy the Festival condominiums, built atop the TIFF Bell Lightbox theatre. It has its own fully-equipped cinema with seating for 55 people.

The Tower cinema will be used for Toronto International Film Festival screenings.

Student style — on a budget

I will be renting a room for the upcoming school year and I'd like it to be bright and fun without breaking the bank. Any ideas?
Jenna Carter, via email

The secret to creating a well-pulled-together room on a budget is to keep all the colours of furniture and accessories consistent in style and colour. Your goal is not to have any one item stand alone to be recognized as a lesser expensive item. I suggest using some bright colours to give your room a personality all its own. Your wall colour and window treatment should match; Olympic Paints' Mountain Stream is a green-blue colour that will create a peaceful environment yet vibrant enough to act as a backdrop to more vibrant colour choice for the furnishings and accessories.

Mountain Stream C-57-3 from Olympic Paints, Olympic.com. Neutralize and calm bold accessories with a soft green/blue paint colour.

Coffee clean up no difficult task

How do you correctly clean a coffee maker and coffee pot? Donna

CHARLES THE BUTLER
askcharlesthebutler@metronews.ca
For more, visit charlesmacpherson.com

Dear Donna,
Well the good news is that this is relatively a simple process. Pour a few cups of white vinegar (five per cent alcoholic volume) into the coffee maker, nothing else.

Let it sit for 10 minutes then turn on the coffee maker and run it through. Once finished, continue to run fresh clean water through the pipes of the coffee maker until the vinegar smell is totally gone.

Now the coffee pot is cleaned the same way, by pouring white vinegar (five per cent alcoholic volume) into the coffee pot, let it stand for 30 minutes then rinse and wash with fresh clean water.

If you do this at least monthly, this should stop the coffee maker and coffee pot from getting mineral build-up.

Cleaning the coffee maker and coffee pot on a regular basis actually allows you to have a better cup of coffee, and keeps the machine in good working order.

Getting rid of pests the green way

What's the eco-friendliest way to get rid of ants in my house?
-Kent of Montreal

QUEEN OF GREEN
Lindsay Coulter

Citronella essential oil is one natural solution to getting rid of bugs in your home. ISTOCK IMAGES

As a temporary fix, try diatomaceous earth. Say that three times fast!

It said to be safer than using borax (sodium borate), especially if you have pets. Sprinkle a small amount of diatomaceous earth along cracks and baseboards, or above the cupboards. It's a naturally occurring fine glasslike powder made from crushed fossilized algae. It is so abrasive that it damages the protective outer shell of creepy crawlies. When that protective exoskeleton is pierced, insects dry up and die. Ask for it at your local garden or hardware store.

Warning: Carefully clean up diatomaceous earth with a damp rag instead of a vacuum to prevent clogging the filter.

As with any problem, you'll need to identify the source. For example, carpenter ants love wet, rotting wood. When my home experienced an indoor ant invasion, it was due to the drain being clogged inside my refrigerator.

Unable to drain properly, the water slowly leaked out the door, onto the floor and underneath the fridge — rotting the wood underneath. After tipping our fridge on its back and using an air compressor to remove the clog, my home is now ant-free.

And for other natural and less toxic temporary solutions for silverfish, fleas, moths or roaches in the home try these home remedies:

To repel silverfish, flies and moths, add a few drops of citronella essential oil and lavender essential oil on cloth strips along windows or inside cupboards.

Avoid using mothballs, which are made of toxic substances like naphthalene — a chemical associated with cancers. They're also dangerous to children because they look like candy.

Instead, store wool clothing and other garments with cedar blocks, cedar chips or in a cedar chest. Or, combine in a sachet two handfuls of dried lavender or rosemary herb with a tablespoon of dried clover and a tablespoon of dried lemon peel. Then toss these bundles into drawers, closets and cupboards. It smells nice to us, but not to moths!

Latest decor trend finds the 'art' in cartography

Boston THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/CITY PRINTS/LLCV

Gotham City THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/CITY PRINTS/LLCV

Wall art. In a GPS world, physical maps are becoming quaint relics for travellers —but decor with a map theme is hot

There's art in cartography: Street grids, the curve of a shoreline and topographic details lend themselves to wall art, rugs and textiles. Besides being great visuals, maps often chart our personal experiences, and that sentimental punch adds to their appeal.

Tony and Katie Rodono of Atlanta started their City Prints map art store after their daughter was born. "We realized maps are great storytellers — of where we met, went to school, went on vacation," says Rodono.

They sell readymade and custom maps of campuses, ballparks and hometowns. They'll make one of your favourite holiday spot or hiking trail. Coming soon: maps from video games, movies and TV shows (cityprintsmapart.com, $40 and up).

Brooklyn's Haptic Lab sells hand-stitched, quilted city maps of Los Angeles, New York City, Paris and Washington, D.C., as well as the Great Lakes. Designer Emily Fischer's "soft maps" project started in 2002 as an academic experiment in tactile wayfinding after her mother was diagnosed with glaucoma. Her baby quilts are textured and colorful; the full-size versions are ivory with light brown stitchery.

The Great Lakes quilt is cotton, with the lakes done in poly-silk. All are finely detailed, and she'll add custom landmarks or features if you request. Coming this fall will be kits to make your own version (hapticlab.com, $145 to $450).

Chicago-based Jenny Beorkrem makes neighbourhood maps, with typography scrunched into the shape of each community; the result, rendered in eco-friendly soy inks on recycled paper, are punchy graphics that vividly depict how cities are divided up (orkposters.com, $22 and up).

Rugs are a great medium for cartographic decor. At Hivespace.com you'll find felted wool rugs of Moscow and Oslo; custom locations are available (hivespace.com, price upon request). Swedish designer Calle Henzel's hand-tufted rugs depict the Champs Elysees and Manhattan in muted shades like charcoal, soft pink and yellow (2modern.com, $1,770-3,260).

Check out Woodcutmaps.com for maps made of exotic and everyday woods; you create your own by choosing your Google map location, then selecting the woods you want used (woodcutmaps.com, pricing based on customization).

Kim Sly, an artist in Portland, Ore., made her first city print several years ago for a friend relocating to New York. That led to a series, and the launch of her business. Pittsburgh, Atlanta, San Diego and Portland are part of the collection she sells atetsy.com/shop/albiedesigns ($20-40). Sly's whimsical illustrations are composites of elements she likes about a place.

"I pay special attention to a city's architecture, and how it contributes to its individuality," she says. "But I'm really looking for a more playful interpretation that people can identify with because of their love for their city."

As many of the designers suggest, these pieces would make terrific gifts. A new marriage; a new baby; a new home. A way to remember that great trip you took.

A powdery mildew on a peony plant is shown in New Paltz, N.Y. The white dusting is a sign of disease. If you don't grow lilac, you may have mildew developing on the leaves of your cucumber, rose, peony or phlox. Each is caused by a different fungus. Identifying plant diseases is key to stopping them. LEE REICH/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A disease by any other name could pose the same risk to other plants

Powdery Mildew. Find the culprit's true name to determine the solution

As it does every year, a powdery white dusting is beginning to appear on the leaves of my lilac bush.

Ah, if only this coloration were desirable, if we could affectionately refer to it as a silvery flecking or a sparkling sheen.

But no, it's dull white and it's a sign of disease, one aptly called powdery mildew.

Your lilac is also probably getting powdery mildew. And if you don't grow lilac, you may have mildew developing on the leaves of your cucumber, rose, peony or phlox.

You might worry that all that powdery mildew will spread from one plant to another all over your garden. But fear not, a few different kinds of fungi cause powdery mildew, and the one that attacks lilac bushes won't attack every other plant — surely not your cucumber or rose plants. Unfortunately, that lilac powder mildew fungus can attack catalpa, dogwood and some other trees. The same goes for the fungus that turns zinnia leaves white with powdery mildew; it also preys on a slew of other garden flowers. Each of the powdery mildews attacks a restricted group of plants.

Know your enemy

Powdery mildew, like other common names of plant diseases, describes a symptom. Other descriptive common names for diseases are scab, leaf spot and brown rot. "Anthracnose" describes a symptom not obvious from its name; plants afflicted with anthracnose have dead areas in leaves.

Diseases having the same descriptive name are not necessarily all caused by the same "germs", or even by germs related to each other. Blight of pear, for example, is caused by a bacterium, while blight of peony is caused by a fungus. The term "blight" is generally used for any disease that causes a plant or plant part to die suddenly.

Descriptive names for plant diseases can get more specific. Fire blight is the blight attacking pear, so-named because blackened leaves cling to the curled-over stems as if they have been singed. The peony affliction is called botrytis blight, "botrytis" meaning grapelike and referring to the grapelike clusters of fungal spores as seen under magnification.

Look closely

The common name of a disease is the first step towards finding the culprit's true name. I don't fear that lilac will spread blight — whoops, I mean powdery mildew — to nearby phlox or peony because lilac's disease is caused by the fungus Microsphaera alni, while phlox's is caused by the fungus Erysiphe cichoracearum, and peony's powdery mildew is caused by Erysiphe polygoni.

In some cases, the common name may be all that's needed to find out how to help a plant. "Westcott's Plant Disease Handbook" by R. Kenneth Horst is a good reference to finding both the Latin name and the cure for just about any disease that might turn up in your garden. The Organic Gardener's Handbook of Natural Pest and Disease Control, by Fern Marshall Bradley, Barbara W. Ellis and Deborah L. Martin, presents a more organic approach to weeds, with less emphasis on nomenclature.

Figuring out what a disease is called makes for better gardening because it forces a close look at just what's going on. Next time something seems amiss with a plant, note first what part or parts are affected. Then characterize the symptoms with such descriptive terms as rust, rot, dieback, canker or leaf spot.

Once named, what to do?

Closer inspection brings on more descriptive names — brown rot or black rot, for example — or scientific names. Look at those ugly spots on your tomato plants' leaves: Alternaria solani marks leaves with dark-brown, round spots a half-inch in diameter, each surrounded by concentric rings. Septoria lycopersici causes spots that are small, round and grey, each surrounded by a single, dark margin. The cure for both is the same: Crop rotation and thorough garden clean up in the fall.

Not all diseases need attention; powdery mildew does lilac little harm. And those that require attention, such as leaf spots of tomato, can be controlled by methods other than spraying. When spraying is needed for a particular disease, it might be something as benign as baking soda, 1 tablespoon added to a gallon of water along with 2 1/2 tablespoons of cooking oil. # Bring rusted furniture back to life

DIY ideas. That old metal furniture isn't junk — show it some love and transform your seating area

On DIY Network's Turf Wars, two teams battle it out for $10,000 using the same batch of materials to transform their yards into spectacular outdoor spaces.

These awesome transformations inspire bringing rusted metal furniture back to life; so, before passing old metal furniture off as junk, put in some weekend DIY love and give your outdoor seating area a whole new look.

Follow the steps below to revive old outdoor metal furniture and be sure to trump any turf war.

Set up the work area

Place a drop cloth or large piece of cardboard over the floor to serve as your work area.

Be sure to have the right tools on hand before getting started including a stiff wire brush, sanding block, clean cloth, spray primer and spray paint. A clear spray lacquer can also be used to give the furniture a shiny finish.

It is always important to have safety glasses and a mask to protect from spray fumes.

Elbow grease

Inspect the furniture to see if there is any cracked or peeling paint and brush it off with the wire brush.

Once complete, use the sanding block to smooth out any rough spots while being careful not to scratch the metal.

Now that all the prep-work is done, it's time to bring the metal furniture back to life.

Prime

Wipe down the furniture using a damp cloth and allow to dry before applying the primer.

Put on safety glasses and the mask and apply the spray primer to the furniture using a continuous circular motion.

As a general rule, it's always best to apply very light coats of primer instead of drenching the metal. Let the primer dry overnight before applying any paint.

From old to new

Decide whether you want your furniture to make a fun, bold statement with a pink or green coat or whether you'd prefer a more classic white look for your outdoor space — there are many different colours of spray paint to choose from.

Apply the chosen spray paint using the same continuous circular motion used when applying the primer.

The best approach for this step is to apply many light coats of paint, letting each one dry before applying the next, until the desired colour is achieved; this should result in a smooth, even look.

Once all coats have been applied, leave the furniture to dry overnight.

Apply the final protective coat of spray lacquer if you want a shiny finish to complete the look. What was old is now new!

Choosing to buy produce and other goods from local farmers and companies means your food is usually fresher. JUPITERIMAGES/BANANA STOCK/THINKSTOCK

Home sweet home

Food and goods. Purchasing from farmers and companies in your region offers many benefits

ASTRID VAN DEN BROEK
For Metro

What does buying local mean? And how do you do it?

We asked Jed Goldberg, president of Toronto-based Earth Day Canada, to share with us the goods on buying local.

WHAT IS BUYING LOCAL?

Buying local means purchasing food and goods produced by farmers and companies in your region.

"There are all different qualifiers as to what is your region — your region could be Ontario for instance, or southern Ontario, or it could be the 905 area," he says. "It all depends on what your criteria are. But what it certainly couldn't be is the Western Hemisphere!"

WHY BUY LOCAL?

Aside from driving money back into your region's businesses, there are environmental factors to consider in considering buying local. When buying foods from overseas farmers, for example, there are environmental transportation costs and concerns that go into buying those goods.

"There's a good example right now in China cornering the market on garlic," notes Goldberg. "They're now the No. 1 garlic producers in the world. So why would you buy garlic from China when you can buy it from Newmarket? It doesn't make sense."

Goldberg adds that buying from producers abroad also means you often don't know what type of farm or production facility your food comes from. The farms, he notes, could be mass factory facilities that might not be as closely monitored in environmental or quality standards compared to a local producer.

Buying local also affords you food that usually stays on the vines longer and is picked closer to selling time.

"So then it's usually going to be healthier, better tasting and more nutritious," Goldberg says. "So you're paying for the freshness and the quality of the food when you're buying local, and not for the transportation, the packaging, the refrigeration and all of that."

HOW TO BUY LOCAL

To scout some local goods, visit your local farmers' market where you can purchase much more than in-season produce. (Many markets often include foods such as baked goods, cured meats, artisan crafts and even clothing.)

"Right now in Canada, the harvest season is coming so there's the greatest available selection of locally grown food in markets across the country," says Goldberg.

If you are shopping in stores, however, look for certifications such as the Local Food Plus (LFP) logo on your products — LFP certifies farms and processors who have adhered to sustainability and production standards.

"If you see that logo, then it's produced by somebody close to where you live," notes Goldberg.

Andy Murray of Great Britain serves against Flavio Cipolla of Italy on Wednesday in Toronto. AARON VINCENT ELKAIM/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Murray's golden form continues

Tennis. British player back on court in Toronto days after topping Federer for Olympic title in London

Andy Murray of Great Britain has had no time to rest since winning the Olympic gold medal on Sunday.

But after doing extensive media interviews over the past few days, he was able to catch a flight to Toronto on Tuesday and played his first Rogers Cup match on Wednesday.

He had an easy time of it against Italy's Flavio Cipolla, winning 6-1, 6-3 but the degree of difficulty will soar on Thursday when he takes on Milos Raonic of Thornhill, Ont., in a third-round match. Raonic defeated Murray in the semifinals of the Barcelona Open nearly four months ago.

"Yeah, it will be tough," Murray said after Wednesday's match, his voice and body language showing that he was still tired. "He'll obviously be motivated playing in his own country. You know he's improved a lot over the last year, year and a half. He's playing really, really good tennis. Very big guy with a big game. Serves well and hits the ball very hard."

Murray has had a whirlwind schedule since beating Roger Federer at Wimbledon in straight sets to win gold.

"You know, it's just not when I finished the match and played the mixed (doubles). It doesn't end there," he said.

"I wasn't back at home until 2:30, did press for about two and a half, three hours after the match and the next morning started again at 8 for about another three, four hours."

Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France admitted he was also tired after losing his opening match.

His 25-year-old countryman Jeremy Chardy, ranked 47th in the world, upset the sixth-ranked Tsonga 6-4, 7-6.

"I think it's not about my game," he said. "You know my game is my game. But I didn't have enough energy to move well."

Tsonga was coming off a gruelling Olympic experience where he won the silver medal in doubles and had a long, difficult match with Raonic that left him drained. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Flyers pad ailing blue-line by re-signing Bourdon

The Flyers re-signed defenceman Marc-Andre Bourdon to a multi-year contract extension on Wednesday, and agreed with centre Scott Laughton on an entry-level contract.

The news comes a day after Philadelphia's defence took another hit, when Andrej Meszaros underwent surgery to repair a torn Achilles tendon. Meszaros is out indefinitely.

Bourdon, 22, was selected by the Flyers in the 2008 third round. He made his NHL debut with the Flyers last season, posting four goals and seven points in 45 games.

Laughton, 18, was the Flyers' first-round selection in June. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Skinner latest deal in Canes storm of activity

The Carolina Hurricanes added to their flurry of off-season deals by awarding a long-term contract to forward Jeff Skinner.

Skinner signed a six-year contract extension worth more than $34 million that will keep him with the Hurricanes through the 2018-19 season, the team said Wednesday.

The winner of the Calder Trophy in 2011 as the NHL's rookie of the year will make $4.35 million in 2013-14 and $6 million in each of the following five seasons. His entry contract, which pays him $900,000 per year, was to expire after this coming season.

"I'm very grateful for them to select me in the draft, and obviously today, showing me the confidence to have me around long term," Skinner said. "It's definitely a nice message ... and hopefully, I can prove them right."

The 20-year-old Skinner has 51 goals and 56 assists in his short career, which began when Carolina took him in the first round of the 2010 draft. He made the team out of camp that season and was selected to the all-star team as a rookie before becoming the franchise's first Calder Trophy winner.

Last year, he had 20 goals and 44 assists despite missing 16 games with a concussion. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canoe-kayak. Van Koeverden finds bright side in silver, Oldershaw buoyed by his bronze

Two friends with a ton of Olympic history made the canoe-kayak medal podium Wednesday.

Adam van Koeverden won silver in kayak, his fourth medal in three Olympics, in the K-1 1,000 metres. And training partner Mark Oldershaw, a third-generation Olympian, claimed canoe bronze in the C-1 1,000 metres.

Watching over both of them was proud coach Scott Oldershaw, Mark's father.

Van Koeverden, the reigning world champion, looked for the silver lining in silver. Oldershaw, who finished 10th in Beijing four years ago when nerves got the best of him, was bubbling over bronze.

"(It feels) very heavy and it's awesome," a grinning Oldershaw said of the medal around his neck. "And I'm going to wear it for a while."

After a blazing start, van Koeverden lost gold to friend and longtime training partner Eirik Veras Larsen of Norway in the final stretch.

Larsen, 36, was the 2004 Olympic champion and 2008 silver medallist in the K-1 1,000. He also won bronze in the K-2 500 in Athens.

Van Koeverden won gold and bronze at the Athens Games in 2004 and a silver in Beijing. The gold and silver came in the 500 metres — which has since been replaced by a 200-metre race — and the bronze in the 1,000. He was eighth in the 1,000 in 2008.

The 30-year-old from Oakville admits Beijing was a hard pill to swallow. He had won a lot of races going into the 2008 Games and put a lot of pressure on himself.

But he has matured over the years. Any disappointment Wednesday was tempered by respect for his rivals and knowing that you can't win them all.

Still, van Koeverden showed his steely side when asked if he had come out too fast.

"I started the way I wanted to," he said. "I was super-comfortable. Going through the 500 I had tons of energy. It's not a case of a screwed-up race plan, this is a case of one guy in the whole world being better than me. And I can live with that.

"Seven billion people, one guy's better. It's OK."

The two Canadians won their medals in vastly different fashions.

Van Koeverden rocketed out of the start and held the lead until Larsen ran him down as the finish approached.

Oldershaw was a full second out of fourth place with 250 metres remaining but powered his way onto the podium. The 29-year-old from Burlington may have got silver had it not been for fast-charging David Cal Figueroa of Spain. Germany's Sebastian Brendel won gold.

Huynh battles to bronze with fortuitous clinches

Canada's Carol Huynh won a bronze medal in freestyle wrestling at the London Olympics on Wednesday while teammate Martine Dugrenier came up just short in her bid to reach the podium.

Huynh, the 2008 Olympic champion, beat Isabelle Sambou of Senegal to finish third in the 48-kilogram category. The Calgary wrestler won tie-breaking clinches after each of the two scoreless rounds.

She said she was elated with the win.

"I didn't want it to end in two clinches but you know what, I'll take it," Huynh said. "I wanted that bronze medal."

About a half-hour later, Dugrenier lost to Battsetseg Soronzonbold of Mongolia in the bronze medal bout at 63 kilograms. Soronzonbold stuffed Dugrenier's attacking attempts and outscored her in both rounds.

There was very little actual wrestling in Huynh's last match as the grapplers spent most of the bout clutching and grabbing. After drawing the offensive position in both clinches, Huynh scored early on both occasions to take the rounds.

Huynh missed out on a chance to wrestle for gold at ExCeL London North Arena 2 when she lost to Japan's Hitomi Obara in the semifinals.

Whitfield broke collarbone in crash

Injuries. Two-time Olympic medallist also needed stitches in big toe and hurt knees and shins in tumble

Simon Whitfield broke his collarbone when he crashed on his bike in Tuesday's Olympic triathlon.

The 37-year-old from Victoria said via Twitter that it's a "small break, not displaced."

Whitfield was forced to drop out of Tuesday's race after he crashed spectacularly in a freak accident early in the bike leg.

In addition to the broken collarbone, Whitfield needed stitches in his big toe. He said his knees and shins were also banged up in the crash.

Whitfield, the Olympic champion in 2000 and silver medallist in 2008, was considered a medal longshot in London. He was Canada's flagbearer at the opening ceremony.

Kayaker Adam van Koeverden, who won a silver medal Wednesday, said Whitfield had planned to come see him race but had to instead have an X-ray.

"I was crying (Tuesday)," van Koeverden said of watching the race. "I was allowing myself to cry, because it was a healthy expression of emotions. I didn't really cry until I saw a picture of (daughter) Pippa and (wife) Jennie. Because I know them both really well and Jennie is the stalwart of that family. She holds everything down and she does so much work.

"He deserved more (Tuesday). He would have run with those guys, I'm certain."

"Simon's run, bike, swim and Jennie's like diapers, laundry, daycare, cooking."

A tear ran down van Koeverden's face as he was speaking.

Van Koeverden wanted to honour Whitfield, who had put van Koeverden's name on his handlebars, by putting the triathlete's name on his boat for the final.

"I didn't have marker so I just wrote it with my finger on my (boat) deck," van Koeverden said at the canoe-kayak venue outside of Windsor. "And I thought this one's for the Whitfield legacy."

FIFA probe won't be completed before bronze-medal match

Canada players are clear to start the bronze-medal match at the Olympic women's soccer tournament because a FIFA probe into their behaviour won't be completed before the game kicks off Thursday.

FIFA is investigating "incidents that occurred" following Canada's 4-3 semifinals loss against the United States on Monday.

Canada players, including forward Christine Sinclair who scored all three of her team's goals, were openly critical of the Norwegian match referee.

However, FIFA said Wednesday that its disciplinary panel cannot prosecute the case before Canada plays France for bronze.

"In view of the elements currently at its disposal, the FIFA disciplinary committee considers that further investigation will be needed regarding incidents that occurred after the match," FIFA said in a statement. "Further information will be provided in due course, but not prior to the bronze-medal match."

The Canadian Soccer Association says it supports FIFA's investigation and will "co-operate fully."

"We will work closely with FIFA to ensure a prompt and fair resolution in this matter," CSA president Victor Montagliani said in a release.

Canada conceded the winning goal in stoppage time at the end of extra time in a thrilling match at Old Trafford.

The team's players and coach were angered by referee Christiana Pedersen awarding an indirect free kick against goalkeeper Erin McLeod that led to the Americans' 80th-minute equalizer.

McLeod was whistled for holding the ball longer than six seconds, and the resulting shot from the U.S. free kick was judged to have been handled by a Canadian defender. Abby Wambach scored the penalty to make the score 3-3.

Track and field. Usain Bolt strikes for easy win in 200-metre semifinal heat

Usain Bolt is one victory away from becoming the first man to repeat as double Olympic sprint champion and reaching his ambition of becoming a "living legend" after he qualified for the 200 metre-final.

On a balmy, clear Wednesday night, Bolt joked as he got into the blocks, laughed when he crouched into the blocks and then sped away for a controlled race which he finished by almost jogging across the line. His win exuded as much confidence as his victory in the 100 on Sunday.

This time, too, everything is set for a direct duel with his training partner Yohan Blake, the silver medallist in the 100.

Usain Bolt runs in the semifinals of the men's 200 metres Wednesday.

The 100 should have been the tough part for Bolt where his starting jitters have been an issue. The 200 is his preferred distance and it showed. He made a military-style salute when he was announced to the crowd, reggae music blaring in the background. After his race, he applauded another capacity crowd of 80,000 at the Olympic Stadium.

Blake had the fastest time with 20.01 seconds, compared with 20.18 for Bolt.

"It's the 200 metres and we are both full speed tomorrow," Blake said. "Anything can happen."

After Thursday's 200 final, Bolt still has the weekend relays coming up.

Defending champs spiked out of London by Italy

The defending Olympic champion U.S. men's volleyball team was eliminated from the London Games with a straight-set quarter-final loss to Italy on Wednesday.

The fifth-ranked United States struggled to defend Italian captain Cristian Savani, who had 19 points in the 28-26, 25-20, 25-20 victory for the sixth-ranked Italians.

U.S. setter Donald Suxho bent over with his hands on his knees and shook his head as Italy celebrated the win at Earls Court. And after congratulating the Italians, the Americans turned to applaud the many U.S. fans in the crowd.

The United States won the gold medal in Beijing, upsetting favourite Brazil 3-1. It was their third gold in men's volleyball, which became an Olympic sport in 1964. Russia is the only other nation with three golds.

Italy has never won the Olympic gold, but the teams has won silver twice, most recently at the 2004 Athens Games. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Make life easy for yourself today. Go with the flow and make the most of opportunities as and when they arrive. If you can do that then everything will be all right with your world.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Today's cosmic alignment warns that if you have any doubts about what you are being asked to get involved with, it might be best to opt out. Your colleagues may not be happy but it's your happiness that counts.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
No matter how confident you may be of your own abilities, a lot still depends on other people, so don't take anything for granted. Make sure you can tell the difference between a calculated risk and a foolish one.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You can sense changes are good for you and, as usual, your instincts are spot on. The readier you are to embrace the future, the quicker you will arrive at a place where your future is secure.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
A few words of encouragement from you could be all it takes to change a friend's day from a bad one into a great one. Maybe you don't realize it but your positive take on life is infectious — in a very good way.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
People know you can be a bit controversial at times but what you say today will antagonize a lot of people. Good. They need to be told that life is what it is, not what they wish it might be.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
It's not true that every Libra is indecisive and you will go out of your way to prove it today. Something needs dealing with, something that you are best positioned to handle. Seize the initiative.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Just because some of the people you live and work with see things differently to you does not mean they are stupid — although it does not mean they are not either! Treat them and their opinions with respect today.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Yes, you must stand up for your rights, but you also need to find ways to get along with other people, especially on the work front where no one will make progress unless you all progress together. Let them know that.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
The planets indicate that the challenges you face over the next 24 hours are the final hurdles in your quest to do something important, so don't give up now. You are so close to the breakthrough you have been dreaming of.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
People in positions of power have been watching you closely and like what they see, so expect an offer of some kind to come your way over the next few days. Take it before one of your rivals does.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
It does not matter how hard the task you are about to undertake happens to be, you will make a resounding success of it.
